

On the 11th of November 2020 our beloved Caffé Piccolo was struck by a devastating fire.

Fortunately our brave, local fire service was able to attend quickly and save the historic main building, albeit with significant smoke and water damage. Unfortunately though, the main engine room of our restaurant 'the kitchen' did not fare so well. It was completely devastated, and would require a complete rebuild.

It was a dark time and we really did not know if we would be able to save the restaurant. But with so much support from local businesses and our regular customers we felt we had to try.

And so with lots of hard work ahead of us we undertook the long road to recovery.

We employed the talents of a great local building company and electricians – and with our own staff pitching in – we were able to complete the work in just under a year.

It was a big achievement, and with great satisfaction we had our grand reopening on October 11th 2021.

We were all immensely proud and It really did feel like a phoenix had risen from the ashes.

84 West Street (Caffé Piccolo)

The earliest recorded use of this building was as the house of Charles Waterman, a tailor who lived here until 1841. From 1875 until 1899, the property was owned by Alfred White, a cooper who made and sold tubs, barrels, baskets and bowls to the people of Farnham.

Throughout the 20th century it has been a licensed property, most of the time as a restaurant. For a while it was used as a club by the local branch of The Royal British Legion, from 1928 until 1930, when it became a pub called The Old Mitre. The building was restored in 1929, during which a Tudor fireplace was discovered and reinstated. Legend has it that a girl dressed in grey now haunts 84 West Street, as she has been seen by that very fireplace on numerous occasions.

After many years of serving Austrian food and beer, in 1995 the restaurant was bought by the current owners and transformed into Caffé Piccolo. The low ceilings, oak panelling and broad staircase of this historic building help to make it one of the most atmospheric eating places in Farnham.
